DISCLOSURE STATEMENT

Pursuant to FRAP 26.1, Appellant, Pro Se, George Jarvis Austin, as an Individual person does not have to file a Disclosure Statement. However, Defendants Tesla, Balance Staffing, and Personnel Staffing Group, as joint employers, may all need to. See FRAP 26.1(a). Plaintiff has removed all other Defendants in light of disclosures, reports, and payments, from the State of California, Auditing and Accounting Department investigators. Plaintiff initially included EDD under “a continuing violation of federal law”, exception to the Eleventh Amendment per their continued Civil Rights violations, prior to delayed payment, and they are now removed as they have verified and paid Appellant George Jarvis Austin the maximum weekly amounts based on audited and verified wages under joint Employers’ penalty of perjury. See California Department of Human Resources Development v. Java, 402 U.S. 121 (1971) See also Ex Parte Young, 209 U.S. 123 (1908)

STATEMENT OF THE CASE	5
SUMMARY OF THE ARGUMENT	15
STANDARD OF REVIEW	19
ARGUMENT	20
I. Appellant, as Pro Se Litigant, and Student, should have been granted leave to Amend in the Interest of Justice, in light of the favorable facts for his case, circumstances, disclosures, and liberal standard to amend in Interest of Justice expressed in Robertson v. Dean Witter, Sharkey v. O'Neal, and Barnes v. Saul.	20
A. Any alleged deficiencies could be easily corrected by Mr. Austin.	22
B. The necessary plead facts, disclosures, and elements taken in whole, can properly be deduced, and inferred from Appellants pleading by the Court.	23
II. Appellant's, pro se, pleadings of Joint Employers FLSA violations, regarding complained about unpaid overtime for multiple weeks, along with independently verified findings of fact per General Order No. 71 disclosures, preliminary authenticating, and buttressing, said pleadings was more than sufficient under this Circuit's Landers standard. 27

A. Appellee/Defendant Employers, including publicly traded Tesla, are jointly responsible for Appellant, pro se's, plead FLSA wage violations, given key factors of control, scheduling, inspection, power to hire and fire, payroll, payment and supervision under Chao, Espinoza, and Scalia. 31

III. Appellant, Pro Se's, protected activity (complaints to supervisors, HR, management, and company officers, etc.) regarding unpaid overtime, Health and Safety, and other violations for multiple weeks leading to adverse employment activity (wrongful termination based on defamatory false accusation of criminal recording), apparently as pretext, only days after meeting with HR Officer is sufficient under FLSA retaliation standard (as articulated by this Circuit's Rosenfield, and the Supreme Court's Kasten). 35

A. Defendant Employers are jointly responsible for Retaliation and Civil Rights violations due to employer retaliation because of FLSA violation, and other Health and Safety Code complaints under joint employment doctrine, as well as extended, and shared, liability articulated in Arias. 45

24 ISSUE(S) PRESENTED

25 The District Court chose to withhold judgment on issues arising out of state 26 law and instead focus on two main areas of Federal liability for Defendants: FLSA
27 violations, and Anti-Retaliation protections for Plaintiff's protected activity.

28 Thus, the main issues that arise are:

29 I. Whether Appellant, as Pro Se Litigant, and Student, should have 30 been granted leave to Amend in the Interest of Justice, in light of the 31 favorable facts for his case, circumstances, disclosures, and liberal

II. Whether Appellant's, pro se, pleadings of Joint Employers FLSA

General Order No. 71 disclosures, preliminary authenticating, and

1 STATEMENT OF THE CASE

3 Note: Mr. Austin, Pro Se, is exempt from excerpts req. See Ninth Cir. R. 28-2.8.

6 Pro Se Plaintiff George Jarvis Austin filed a complaint against Tesla Motors,

7 Inc.1 (“Tesla”), Personnel Staffing Group, LLC2 (“PSG”), Balance Staffing

8 Workforce, LLC3 (“BSW”), and several individual defendants (collectively, 9 “Defendants”) alleging nine causes of action arising out of work he performed as

10 an employee of all three joint employers at Tesla facilities. See Docket No. 18

11 (First Amended Complaint (FAC)).4 Prior to any filings, Mr. Austin reached out

12 to get service and assistance from Federal Pro Bono Project’s Pro Se Help Desk as 13 Judge Spero later recommended, yet unlike what Judge Chen’s opinion said,

14 falsely, Mr. Austin was actually denied service. See Docket No. 18; FAC at 17-18

15 In practice the denial of service from Pro Bono Project was analogous to Denny’s

16 refusal of service (where Black customers were made to wait longer, and pay

17 more, or outright refused service) See Plaintiff, v. FLAGSTAR CORPORATION

18 and DENNY'S, INC., Civ. No. 93-20208-JW (Consolidated). Mr. Austin

19 attempted to follow up multiple times, but they refused to serve after initially 20 providing him
 21 with incorrect legal advice, yet he still utilized all available resources to him, and 22 was not discouraged due to others poor decision-making. FAC at 17-18.

23 Appellant, George Jarvis Austin, experienced negative employment action 24 (wrongful termination) less than a week (only days) after reporting wage, health 25 and safety, and other violations in HR meeting with HR Officer (after reporting for 26 multiple weeks). Without evidence, conversation, escalation, or opportunity to 27 defend against false accusation, Appellant was there-after falsely accused of 28 recording an unnamed supervisor in violation of California's wiretapping laws 29 (apparently as pretext). See id. The accusation was not only false, and hypocritical 30 (but also retaliation for reporting violations of various state and federal 31 employment laws. See id. While [jointly] employed by PSG, BSW and Tesla, 32 beginning in the summer of 2019 "up through 2020" Mr. Austin worked at Tesla.
 33 See FAC at 2, 20.6 Pay discrepancies, labor violations and and a second set of 34 payroll checks containing Mr. Austin's personally identifiable information were 35 discovered by Mr. Austin. Id. at 21. These checks, compared with ledgers per basic

36 forensic accounting strategies, and early inquiry, helped identify unpaid wages 37 PSG, BSW, and Tesla, jointly owes Appellant. Id. See also Docket #20, #68 38 (Verified Plaintiff's wages, [and wage statements for Q3 and Q4] Plaintiff wages 39 for Q3 & Q4, with wages in Q4 totaling above the maximum benefit threshold of 40 $28,145.01 (for months October through December) triggering Plaintiffs 41 maximum benefit amount of $1,300 weekly due to out of work physical injury (car
 42 accident - See Austin v
 43 *Kemper*www.pacermonitor.com/public/case/40069998/Austin_v_Kemper_Corporation_Insurance); wages investigated and confirmed by Defendant Employers 44 via State of California Auditing and Accounting Department, Investigators under 45 penalty of perjury))

47 In addition to labor code violations, Mr. Austin noticed certain health and 48 safety violations and also reported them to “all involved organizations, and persons 49 responsible.” Id. Part of complaint process, particularly health and safety code 50 violations was a series of internal reports and solutions platform where Mr. Austin 51 made 15+ complaints and provided solutions. Some were done so well Tesla’s

52 safety committee personally requested to meet, yet part of the retaliation was 53 interference, stalling, by supervisors and management to the actual meeting.

54 "Fair notice" to liable joint employer's was provided and response from 55 their representatives confirms they understood the level of seriousness of 56 complaints.

57 One said as mentioned "you are barking up the wrong tree," the HR Officer said in 58 Tesla meeting prior to defamatory retaliation against Appellant, George Jarvis 59 Austin "you shouldn't have to deal with that and take the rest of the day off with 60 pay [Paraphrased] (prior to retaliating days later)." Mr. Austin, Pro Se, made 61 clear leading up to that conversation orally and in writing that there were unpaid 62 overtime wages, and other pay, and time-log discrepancies that needed correction 63 with management supervisors, HR Officers, etc. Plaintiff worked so much 64 overtime whereas management team member inquired into why I was working so 65 hard, and so much, and attempted to put a limit on how much I worked. A variety 66 of persons were provided fair notice including, but not limited to: Jerome Guillen 67 <jerome@tesla.com ; (who apparently took over for Bert Bruggeman), Freddy 68 Rivera <frivera@tesla.com), multiple Supervisors, Deputy General Counsel Yusef

69 Mohamed Ymohamed@tesla.com), (whom Bert made intro to when saying I, Mr.
70 Austin, was too smart to work in that Department given skills, intelligence, 71 background and pedigree, etc.). Mr. Austin also provided fair notice to Elon Musk 72 erm@tesla.com (Elon Musk), and management at Tesla prior to HR meeting with 73 HR Officer Vince Woodard, vwoodard@tesla.com from personal and my Tesla 74 company email geaustin@tesla.com. All were informed prior to, and after, 75 retaliatory, defamatory, and negative employment action was made after Mr.
76 Austin's wage, health and safety, record-keeping and other complaints.

77 Mr. Austin's disclosures did not sit well with his supervisors and his 78 relationship with them became increasingly, and strangely, strained (as he was 79 attempting to avoid need for a lawsuit, or other legal action). Id. at 22. In early 80 2020, Mr. Austin met with a Tesla human resource officer and a hiring manager to 81 discuss a promotion and to resolve his health, safety, and wage issues. Id. At the 82 end of the meeting, Mr. Austin was assured his health, safety, and wage concerns 83 would be resolved and was instructed by Tesla's HR Officer first to be treated 84 again in Telsa Clinic for on the job leg injuries, and then to take the rest of the day 85 off with pay. Id. at 23. Mr. Austin is still suffering from that injury 600+ days

86 later, and still hasn't received Workers compensation. See Austin v Atlina - 87 www.pacermonitor.com/public/case/36205191/Austin_v_Atlina_et_al) Prior to 88 work related injury at Tesla Plaintiff could ride an outside mountain bike, play 89 basketball, and other activities, yet since injury to date has not been able to engage 90 due to leg pains and mobility limitations.

91 A series of Employer "missteps" occurred thereafter, the HR Meeting, 92 including a defamatory false statement that Mr. Austin recorded a supervisor in 93 violation of California law. Id. Mr. Austin subsequently received a voicemail from 94 BSW personnel, representing joint-employers, according to Tesla HR Officer, that 95 his employment was being terminated because of his alleged violation of 96 California law (negative employment action). Id. at 23, 28, 99. Joint employers 97 were not only well aware, and provided fair notice of the issues specifically, but 98 also well aware of these well known, widely reported on, and documented, 99 problematic patterns with their organizations prior to Mr. Austin making 100 complaints. Telsa's ongoing issues with lack of response, or worse retaliation, to 101 legitimate concerns (i.e. labor code violations, health and safety code violations, 102 worker's compensation violations, wage theft, racism, retaliation, etc.) are being 103 covered widely from SEC reports, to news coverage See Addendum for full 104 discussion: [1] - [46].

105 As mentioned in the Tesla Coverage "N*gg*r" is an aged term designed to 106 demean, humiliate, strip away rights, and control Black people during a time of 107 mass enslavement, in many ways falsely labeling a Black man a "criminal" in 108 modern parlance, and in a time of mass incarceration is its equivalent and serves 109 the same nefarious purposes (demean, humiliate, strip away rights, and control - 110 especially when acting on this assumption as employers did). See Elizabeth 111 Hinton & DeAnza Cook, The mass criminalization of Black Americans: A 112 historical overview, 4 Annual Review of Criminology 261–286 (2021). See also 113 Louis Michael Seidman, Hyper-Incarceration and Strategies of Disruption: Is 114 There a WayOut?, 9 OHIO ST. J. CRIM. L. 109 (2011) Because we live in live in 115 the first prison society according to Loic Wacquant (who Professor Seidman cites), 116 with largest population of prisoners on the planet, with an over representation of 117 Black men incarcerated, it hard to overestimate the negative repercussion of a false 118 criminal accusation in any environment (given the history of the country), but 119 especially in an employment context, when innocent of false accusation (where 120 Defamation per Se liability would be appropriate given the importance this area of 121 our lives is given in the law). See Peter Edelman's, Georgetown Law Professor, 122 Not a Crime to Be Poor: The Criminalization of Poverty in America See also 123 Elizabeth Hinton & DeAnza Cook, The mass criminalization of Black 124 Americans: A historical overview, 4 Annual Review of Criminology 261–286 125 (2021).

126 It is hard enough for any employee to come forward and report labor, and 127 other issues (due to fear of retaliation), but even more challenging where an 128 organizational context where lack of response to major issues, or retaliation 129 appears the norm. Prior to work injury, Mr. Austin was getting back into shape to 130 be able to start back up Plyometrics training and be able to dunk again (nothing too 131 extravagant just Mr. Austin's normal ability to 360, double pump, drop step, or or 132 single leg dunk off of either in a fast break context in recreational fun, when in 133 decent shape, and as a personal standard of health) would workout at local gyms 134 "City Sports Club" prior to, and after, 12+ hour days (not including commute and 135 donning and doffing protective wear) while getting straight A's in school (now 7

136 semesters, going on 8 of straight A's), preparing to score in top 1(one) percentile 137 worldwide in multiple standardized tests (as have done previously), and practicing 138 law in Federal Court, prior to obtaining Juris Doctor (JD), or taking the bar exam, 139 Pro Se, in Austin v. Georgetown, in appeals due to lower Court error(s) (as well as 140 others), (working a bunch of overtime to get out of temporary financial "tight" 141 economic position). During Tesla's orientation, training, and safety protocols one 142 of the trainers said Tesla's standard is to make sure you leave at minimum, as you 143 came, physically, however, they did not meet their own standards, nor take 144 responsibility to correct the issues once made aware to them, and instead retaliated 145 (literally added insult to injury).

146
147 BECAUSE evaluating plausibility is a "context-specific task that requires 148 the reviewing court to draw on its judicial experience and common sense" (Iqbal, 149 556 U.S. at 679).... it is important to understand and take into account the public 150 information, news, and reports shedding light to examine the context, properly

151 infer, deduce, utilize common sense, and judicial experience (making Appellants 152 claims even more plausible toward probable). See Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S.
 153 662, 679, 129 S.Ct. 1937, 173 L.Ed.2d 868 (2009).

154 SUMMARY OF THE ARGUMENT

155 I. Appellant, as Pro Se Litigant, and Student, should have been granted leave 156 to Amend in the Interest of Justice, in light of the favorable facts for his 157 case, circumstances, disclosures, and liberal standard to amend in Interest of 158 Justice expressed in Robertson v. Dean Witter, Sharkey v. O'Neal, and 159 Barnes v. Saul.

160 Because, Mr. Austin's complaint could be saved by amendment, under Robertson
 161 v. Dean Witter, as well as Barnes v. Saul, and because he is not required to show 162 that the claim is probable under Iqbal, the Liberal Construction Doctrine along 163 with in the Interest of Justice doctrine argue in favor of granting leave to amend 164 (especially since Landers standard is met of at least one week of unpaid overtime 165 pled). See Hirst v. Gertzen, 676 F.2d 1252, 1264-65 (9th Cir. 1982) Sharkey v.
 166 O'Neal, 778 F.3d 767, 774 (9th Cir. 2015)

167 Any alleged deficiencies could be easily corrected by Mr. Austin. Because 168 of the bias in favor of granting leave, less stringent standard for Pro Se litigants, 169 and liberal construction doctrine along with pled facts, as applied to precedent, that 170 are favorable to Plaintiff's success on the merits any deficiencies can be easily 171 corrected. The necessary plead facts, disclosures, and elements taken in whole, 172 can properly be deduced, and inferred from Appellants pleading by the Court.
173 Because of the disclosed Audited independent findings of fact by the State of 174 California under the penalty of perjury with Defendant Employers, to buttress the 175 favorable plead facts meeting standards under Landers (unpaid OT), and 176 Rosenfield (anti-retaliation), along with multiple current events, and examples of 177 joint employers engaging in the very liability creating behavior at issue here, it is 178 reasonable for the Court to deduce and infer sufficiency of pleadings. This is 179 especially true with Twombly's reminder that "a complaint needs only enough facts 180 to suggest that discovery may reveal evidence of illegality, even if the likelihood 181 of 182 finding such evidence is remote (inapposite to 'remote;' as the facts, and 183 disclosures suggest likely to succeed on the merits)." Twombly, 550 U.S. at 556.

184 II. Appellant's, pro se, pleadings of Joint Employers FLSA violations, 185 regarding complained about unpaid overtime for multiple weeks, along 186 with independently verified findings of fact per General Order No. 71 187 disclosures, preliminary authenticating, and buttressing, said pleadings was 188 more than sufficient under this Circuit's Landers standard.

189 Because it was well plead that Plaintiff worked multiple over-time days, and weeks 190 (more than 40 hours), as the structure of that work at Tesla is literally everyday, 191 and nearly every week, work hours accumulate Overtime (and Mr. Austin was not 192 paid at least one week of the multiple weeks of overtime, and made complaints to 193 correct that issue, repeatedly, leading up to HR meeting with HR Officer that 194 preceded retaliation days later) pleading standards under Landers, and Rosenfield 195 were met. Appellee/Defendant Employers, including publicly traded Tesla, are 196 jointly responsible for Appellant, pro se's, plead FLSA wage violations, given key 197 factors of control, scheduling, inspection, power to hire and fire, payroll, payment 198 and supervision under Chao, Espinoza, and Scalia. All key factors are in favor of 199 joint-employer responsibility as one Hundred (100%) of the training, supervision, 200 management, safety protocols, on the job injury, control, scheduling, inspection,

201 and initial treatment in Tesla Clinic (while on augmented work schedule due to 202 ongoing leg injuries) and other controls (Badges, Electronic Scheduling Device, 203 Internal communication systems, etc.) were at, and with, Tesla in accord with 204 factors from Chao, Espinosa, and Scalia for joint-employer responsibility, and 205 liability.

206 III. Appellant, Pro Se's, protected activity (complaints to supervisors, HR, 207 management, and company officers, etc.) regarding unpaid overtime, 208 Health and Safety, and other violations for multiple weeks leading to 209 adverse employment activity (wrongful termination based on defamatory 210 false accusation of criminal recording), apparently as pretext, only days 211 after meeting with HR Officer is sufficient under FLSA retaliation standard 212 (as articulated by this Circuit's Rosenfield, and the Supreme Court's 213 Kasten).

214 Because Mr. Austin made "the assertion of statutory rights" with sufficient 215 clarity, and detail "for a reasonable employer[s] to understand it," under Rosenfield
216 joint employers were provided fair notice, and are liable for retaliation Defendant 217 Employers are jointly responsible for Retaliation and Civil Rights violations due to

218 employer retaliation because of FLSA violation, and other Health and Safety Code 219 complaints under joint employment doctrine, as well as extended, and shared, 220 liability articulated in Arias.

222 STANDARD OF REVIEW

223 For all issues set forth the standard of review is de novo. See FRAP 228 the claim is probable. Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 679 (2009).... "Determining

243 I. Appellant, as Pro Se Litigant, and Student, should have been granted 244 leave to Amend in the Interest of Justice, in light of the favorable facts 245 for his case, circumstances, disclosures, and liberal standard to amend 246 in Interest of Justice expressed in *Robertson v. Dean Witter, Sharkey v.
247 O'Neal, and Barnes v. Saul.

248 Broadly, a dismissal under Fed.R.Civ.P. 12(b)(6) should not be affirmed 249 unless it is clear that the complaint could not be saved by any amendment.

250 Robertson v. Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc., 749 F.2d 530, 541 (9th Cir. 1984).

251 Under Barnes the Court “review[s] de novo an order of dismissal under Federal 252 Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6). Depot, Inc. v. Caring for Montanans, Inc., 915
253 F.3d 643, 652 (9th Cir. 2019). To state a plausible claim for relief, a plaintiff is not 254 required to show that the claim is probable. Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 679 255 (2009). ... Determining whether a complaint states a plausible claim for relief will .
256 . . be a context-specific task that requires the reviewing court to draw on its judicial 257 experience and common sense." Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 679. Documents filed pro se are 258 to "to be liberally construed ." Erickson v. Pardus, 551 U.S. 89, 94 (2007)." Barnes 259 v. Saul, No. 19-17203, at *2 (9th Cir. Dec. 30, 2020) Moreover the facts are taken 260 and understood favorably to the Plaintiff See Hamilton v. Brown, 630 F.3d 889, 261 892-93 (9th Cir. 2011) ("when determining whether a complaint states a claim, a 262 court must accept as true all allegations of material fact and must construe those 263 facts in the light most favorable to the plaintiff." Id. "Additionally, in general, 264 courts must construe pro se pleadings liberally ." Id. (citing Balistreri v. Pacifica 265 Police Dep't, 901 F.2d 696, 699 (9th Cir. 1988)).")

266 When unclear it should persuade the Court that it would be in the interests of 267 justice to remand the matter to give the opportunity to amend claims to comply 268 with the requirements of precedent (i.e. Landers standard of at least one week of 269 unpaid overtime). See Hirst v. Gertzen, 676 F.2d 1252, 1264-65 (9th Cir. 1982) 270 (plaintiff afforded opportunity to amend pleadings on remand). This Principle is 271 highlighted in Sharkey, whereas "dismissal with prejudice constitutes an abuse of 272 discretion where the district court fails to make a determination "that the pleading 273 could not possibly be cured by the allegation of other facts," Sharkey v. O'Neal, 274 778 F.3d 767, 774 (9th Cir. 2015) (quoting Lopez, 203 F.3d at 1127 (emphasis 275 added) (internal quotation marks omitted)), and this is so " 'even if no request to 276 amend the pleading was made.' " Doe v. United States, 58 F.3d 494, 497 (9th

277 Cir.1995) (quoting Cook, Perkiss & Liehe v. N. Cal. Collection Service, 911 F.2d 278 242, 247 (9th Cir.1990).

279 A. Any alleged deficiencies could be easily corrected by Mr. Austin.

280 Because the plead facts are favorable to Plaintiff's success on the merits, 281 (i.e. worked overtime majority of weeks, and was not paid accordingly for several, 282 complained about this, and other discrepancies, orally and in writing prior till and in 283 meeting with HR Officer to correct issue before being retaliated against days later), 284 any alleged deficiency in pleading could be easily amended to conform to any 285 precedential standard (if not already met). Under Esntion Records "The court should 286 freely give leave when justice so requires this rule evinces a bias in favor of 287 granting leave to amend" Esntion Records, Inc. v. Jonestm, Inc., Civil Action No.
 288 07-CV-2027-L, at *2 (N.D. Tex. Apr. 2, 2009). Christensen accurately asserts "The 289 Supreme Court has directed federal trial courts to read pro se papers liberally .
 290 Hughes v. Rowe, 449 U.S. 5, 9, 101 S.Ct. 173, 175, 66 L.Ed.2d 163 291 (1980) ... [it is error to fail] to [adequately] take into account pro se status and thus 292 failed obligation "to make reasonable allowances to protect pro se litigants from 293 inadvertent forfeiture of important rights ... a pro se litigant "should be afforded ...
 294 opportunity [to] fairly freely to amend his complaint."... [and should] not insist on 295 an unreasonable degree of formality in the pleadings" but instead ..."in terms 296 clearly understandable by laymen" ...[to ensure] not defeated by "arcane legal 297 technicalities." Id. In Scherping v. Commissioner, 747 F.2d 478, 480 (8th Cir.

 298 1984), [Further]... pro se pleadings are to be held to less stringent standards and are 299 to be liberally construed . Id. at 149. cases have extended the liberality doctrine 300 beyond the prisoner/civil rights context. The policy allowing liberal reading of pro 301 se pleadings is particularly appropriate in tax (and other complex) cases (like 302 employment). [whereas litigants], are likely to have difficulty understanding the 303 intricacies [of] litigation and procedure." Christensen v. C.I.R, 786 F.2d 1382,
 304 1384-85 (9th Cir. 1986)

305 B. The necessary plead facts, disclosures, and elements taken in 306 whole, can properly be deduced, and inferred from Appellants 307 pleading by the Court.

308 As Iqbal and Twombly reminds evaluating a complaint's plausibility is a 309 "context-specific task that requires the reviewing court to draw on its judicial 310 experience and common sense." Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 679., it need not contain 311 "detailed factual allegations," Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555; see also Erickson v.
 312 Pardus, 551 U.S. 89, 93 (2007) ("[S]pecific facts are not necessary . . ."). Rather, 313 a complaint needs only enough facts to suggest that discovery may reveal evidence 314 of illegality, even if the likelihood of finding such evidence is remote. Twombly,

315 550 U.S. at 556. Because of the disclosed Audited independent findings of fact by 316 the State of California under the penalty of perjury with Defendant Employers, to 317 buttress the plead facts meeting standards under Landers (unpaid OT), and 318 Rosenfield (anti-retaliation), along with multiple current events, and examples of 319 this specific, and similarly situated companies covered in the news, and other 320 pubic forums, specifically engaging in the very liability creating behavior at issue 321 here, it is reasonable for the Court to deduce and infer sufficiency of pleadings.
 322 This is especially true under Washington as even “inartful pleading” by pro se 323 litigants are instructed by the Supreme Court to be be construed liberally. See 324 Washington
 325 v. Garrett, 10 F.3d 1421, 1432 n.14 (9th Cir. 1993) Eldridge v. Block, 832 F.2d 326 1132, 1137 (9th Cir. 1987) (quoting Boag v. MacDougall, 454 U.S. 364, 365, 102 327 S.Ct. 700, 701, 70 L.Ed.2d 551 (1982)).”
 328 Under Ballaris this doctrine of liberality allows for proper inference, and 329 deduction as to sufficiency (given the pleadings, context, and disclosure) Ballaris

330 v. Wacker Siltronic Corp., 370 F.3d 901, 908 (9th Cir. 2004) ("Once a federal 331 claim is properly presented, a party can make any argument in support of that 332 claim; parties are not limited to the precise argument they made..." Yee v.
 333 Escondido, 503 U.S. 519, 534, 112 S.Ct. 1522, 118 L.Ed.2d 153 334 (1992). "Where, as here, the question presented is one of law, we consider it in 335 light of "all relevant authority," regardless of whether such authority was properly 336 presented in the district court. Elder v. Holloway, 510 U.S. 510, 516, 114 S.Ct.
 337 1019, 127 L.Ed.2d 344 (1994).") As Gordon articulates when "'denial [to amend, 338 or alternatively unjustified dismissal] rests on an inaccurate view of law, and is 339 therefore an abuse of discretion,' [a] de novo review of the underlying legal 340 determination [is required]. Id. All allegations of material fact made in the 341 complaint are taken as true and construed in the light most favorable to the 342 plaintiff. See Smith v. Jackson, 84 F.3d 1213, 1217 (9th Cir. 1996).") See Gordon
 343 v. City of Oakland, 627 F.3d 1092, 1094-95 (9th Cir. 2010)

344 As did Appellants pleadings, which can be properly inferred and deduced, 345 they "must comply with the FLSA's... wage requirements. ... employees cannot 346 waive the protections of the FLSA , Brooklyn Sav. Bank v. O'Neil, 324 U.S. 697,

347 707, 65 S.Ct. 895, 89 L.Ed. 1296 (1945), nor may labor organizations negotiate 348 provisions that waive employees' statutory rights under the FLSA . Barrentine v.
 349 Arkansas-Best Freight Sys., 450 U.S. 728, 740-41,101 S.Ct. 1437, 67 L.Ed.2d 641
 350 (1981)."...) "The United States Department of Labor has adopted regulations 351 outlining employers' FLSA obligations. [including] 29 C.F.R. § 531.35, which 352 provides in pertinent part: Whether in cash or other facilities, 'wages ' cannot be 353 considered to have been paid by the employer and received by the employee unless 354 they are paid finally and unconditionally or 'free and clear.'")" See Gordon v. City 355 of Oakland, 627 F.3d 1092, 1095 (9th Cir. 2010) Here Plaintiff/Appellant alleged 356 more than the minimum pleading standard under Landers (i.e. that he was not 357 properly paid "free and clear" overtime of at least one week, in fact from multiple 358 weeks, made overtime wage complaints, and was subsequently retaliated against).
 359 This should have met the pleading standard, or at minimum been granted leave to 360 amend in the interest of justice (as the facts, and disclosures from independent 361 finders of fact (i.e. State of California Auditors), provide enough to infer that not 362 only are any alleged deficiencies fixable, but are likely to succeed on the merits).

363 II. Appellant's, pro se, pleadings of Joint Employers FLSA violations,

364 regarding complained about unpaid overtime for multiple weeks, along

365 with independently verified findings of fact per General Order No. 71

366 disclosures, preliminary authenticating, and buttressing, said pleadings

367 was more than sufficient under this Circuit's Landers standard.

368 Under Landers “ at a minimum the plaintiff must allege at least one

369 workweek when he worked in excess of forty hours and was not paid for the excess

370 hours in that workweek, or was not paid minimum wages.” Landers v. Quality

371 Commc'ns, Inc., 771 F.3d 638, 646 (9th Cir. 2014). Under Williamson the Court

372 “review[s] a dismissal for failure to state a claim pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil 373 Procedure 12(b)(6) de novo. See TwoRivers v. Lewis, 174 F.3d 987, 991 (9th Cir.

374 1999). A complaint should not be dismissed unless it appears beyond doubt that

375 the plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of the claim that would entitle it to 376 relief. See Morley v. Walker, 175 F.3d 756, 759 (9th Cir. 1999).” See Williamson

377 v. General Dynamics Corp., 208 F.3d 1144, 1149 (9th Cir. 2000) Landers

378 continues that the Court must“accept as true all well pleaded facts in the complaint

379 and construe them in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party.” Zadrozny 380 v. Bank of N.Y. Mellon, 720 F.3d 1163, 1167 (9th Cir.2013)....After all, most (if 381 not all) of the detailed information concerning a plaintiff-employee's compensation 382 and schedule is in the control of the defendants. See Pruell, 678 F.3d at 15 ; see 383 also 29 U.S.C. § 211(c) (FLSA provision requiring employers subject to the FLSA 384 to keep records concerning their employees' work schedules and compensation).")" 385 See Landers v. Quality Commc'ns, Inc., 771 F.3d 638, 640 (9th Cir. 2014)

386 Here, it was well plead that Plaintiff worked multiple over-time days, and 387 weeks (more than 40 hours), as the structure of that work at Tesla is literally 388 everyday, and nearly every week, work hours accumulate Overtime (and Mr.
 389 Austin was not paid at least one week of the multiple weeks of overtime, and made 390 complaints to correct that issue, repeatedly, leading up to HR meeting with HR 391 Officer that preceded retaliation days later). Plaintiff worked, above and beyond, 392 additional days nearly every week to the point a supervisor/manager even inquired 393 as to why I was working so hard, and attempted to put a cap on how much 394 overtime I could work. According to State of California Auditing and Accounting 395 Department Plaintiff was not only underpaid (at minimum approx 25K), but 396 verified those findings of fact, disclosed to the Court, under penalty of perjury by 397 Defendant Employers.

398 It is apparent, utilizing context, and common sense, as partially informed by 399 reports on current events, that labor code (and other) violations by Tesla, and joint 400 employers, are not novel, and are plausible with plead facts. Similar to the unpaid 401 overtime wages in Chao, in violation of the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) , 29
 402 U.S.C. § 207(a)(1). [Defendants], as it turns out, was not new to overtime wage 403 violations. Chao v. A-One Med. Servs., Inc., 346 F.3d 908, 913-14 (9th Cir. 2003) 404 "One of the principal purposes of the FLSA is to ensure that employees are 405 provided appropriate compensation for all hours worked. See, e.g., 29 C.F.R. § 406 778.223 ("Under the Act an employee must be compensated for all hours 407 worked."); 29 C.F.R. § 778.315 ..."The Supreme Court has held that in enacting 408 the FLSA Congress intended "to guarantee either regular or overtime 409 compensation for all actual work or employment. To hold that an employer may 410 validly compensate his employees for only a fraction of time consumed in actual 411 labor would be inconsistent with the very purpose and structure" of the Act.

414 Wacker Siltronic Corp., 370 F.3d 901, 913 (9th Cir. 2004)

415 Defendant/Appellee joint employers are covered, and thus liable under 416 FLSA as outlined in Chao. See Chao v. A-One Med. Servs., Inc., 346 F.3d 908, 417 914 (9th Cir. 2003) ("In order to be covered by the FLSA's overtime rules, 418 employees must be "engaged in commerce or in the production of goods for 419 commerce [i.e. Tesla products], or . . . employed in an enterprise engaged in 420 commerce." 29 U.S.C. § 207(a)(1). In other words, coverage exists if either the 421 employee is engaged in commerce (individual coverage), 29 U.S.C. § 203(b)

422 (defining "commerce" as "trade, commerce, transportation, transmission, or

423 communication among the several States or between any State and any place

424 outside thereof"), or the employer is an enterprise engaged in commerce 425 (enterprise coverage), 29 U.S.C. § 203(s) (defining "enterprise engaged in 426 commerce" as enterprises that, inter alia, have annual gross revenue of $500,000 or 427 greater). See

428 Zorich v. Long Beach Fire Dep't Ambulance Serv., Inc., 118 F.3d 682, 686 (9th 429 Cir. 1997)"

435 All key factors are in favor of joint-employer responsibility as Plaintiff's 436 wage payments came through all organizational entities Personnel Staffing Group, 437 and Balance Staffing, and originated from Tesla (as noted on the check stubs 438 disclosed per General Order 71 See Docket #20, #68, for work at Tesla). One 439 Hundred (100%) of the training, supervision, management, safety protocols, on the 440 job injury, control, scheduling, inspection, and initial treatment in Tesla Clinic 441 (while on augmented work schedule due to ongoing leg injuries) and other controls
442 (Badges, Electronic Scheduling Device, Internal communication systems, etc.)
443 were at, and with, Tesla. Accordingly, in the Ninth Circuit, "the concept of joint 444 employment should be defined expansively under the FLSA." Chao v. A-One

 450 determined that the grower exercised significant control over the farmworkers' 451 working conditions because the grower: (1) controlled the overall harvest schedule; 452 (2) controlled the number of workers needed for harvesting; (3) advised the labor 453 contractor about when to begin the harvest; (4) had the power to decide which days 454 were suitable for harvesting, e.g., grower called off the harvest one day due to a 455 shortage of bins; (5) had the right to inspect all of the work performed by the 456 farmworkers; and (6) was present in the fields on a daily basis. Id. at 642.”

 458 Apr. 11, 2012) According to Espinosa “The five formal or regulatory "factors" 459 are: "(A) The nature and degree of control of the workers; (B) The degree of 460 supervision, direct or indirect, of the work; (C) The power to determine the pay 461 rates or the methods of payment of the workers; (D) The right, directly or 466 F.3d 771, 776 n.4 (9th Cir. 2009) (the "joint employer" theory is recognized under 467 the FLSA. See Torres-Lopez v. May, 111 F.3d 633, 638 (9th Cir. 1997). ... the 468 FLSA imposes independent obligations on employers. See Leddy v. Standard 469 Drywall, Inc., 875 F.2d 383, 387 (2d Cir. 1989) (stating that the "FLSA commands 470 employers to pay specified wages)

471 Under Scalia, the Three Musketeers' motto, by Alexandre Dumas, 'all for 472 one, and one for all', is apt as "all joint employers are responsible, both 473 individually and jointly, for compliance with all of the applicable provisions of the 474 act." A newer, not-yet-effective version of this regulation refers expressly to joint 475 and several liability: "[A] joint employer is jointly and severally liable with ... any 476 other joint employers for compliance with all of the applicable provisions of the 477 Act (stating that the FLSA "was designed to regulate the conduct of employers for 478 the benefit of employees")." Scalia v. Emp'r Sols. Staffing Grp., 951 F.3d 1097,
 479 1103 (9th Cir. 2020)

480 Under Chao's factors the specific calculus might be slightly different, but 481 the underlying result would equate the same: joint liability (as Tesla Motors, BSW, 482 and PSG share common business purpose, common control, related activities, etc.
 483 regarding work that forms basis of this action) See Chao v. A-One Med. Servs., 484 Inc., 346 F.3d 908, 915 (9th Cir. 2003) ("Enterprise' means the related activities 485 performed (either through unified operation or common control) by any person or 486 persons for a common business purpose." 29 U.S.C. § 203(r)(1). If these three 487 elements — related activities, unified operation or common control and common 488 business purpose — are present, different organizational units are grouped together 489 for the purpose of determining FLSA coverage. Id.; Brennan v. Arnheim Neely, 490 Inc., 410 U.S. 512, 518, 93 S.Ct. 1138, 35 L.Ed.2d 463 (1973)....Common' control 491 . . . exists where the performance of the described activities [is] controlled by one 492 person or by a number of persons, corporations, or other organizational units 493 acting together." 29 C.F.R. § 779.221.

494 " "[C]ontrol' . . . includes the power to direct, restrict, regulate, govern, or 495 administer the performance of the activities." ...We must look beyond formalistic 496 corporate separation to the actual or pragmatic operation and control, whether 497 unified or, instead, separate as to each unit." Donovan v. Grim Hotel Co., 747 F.2d 498 966, 970 (5th Cir. 1984)...the facts establish that the employee is employed jointly 499 by two or more employers, i.e., that employment by one employer is not 500 completely disassociated from employment by the other employer(s), all of the 501 employee's work for all of the joint employers during the workweek is considered 502 as one employment for purposes of the Act. In this event, all joint employers are 503 responsible, both individually and jointly, for compliance with all of the applicable

504 provisions of the act, including the overtime provisions, with respect to the entire 505 employment for the particular workweek. 29 C.F.R. § 791.2(a) (footnotes omitted).
 506 See, e.g., Karr v. Strong Detective Agency, Inc., 787 F.2d 1205, 1208 (7th Cir.
 507 1986) (aggregating hours from joint employers for the purpose of determining 508 overtime); Wirtz v. Hebert, 368 F.2d 139, 141-42 (5th Cir. 1966) (same); cf.
 509 Moon v. Kwon, 248 F.Supp.2d 201, 236-38 (S.D.N.Y. 2002) (applying § 791.2(a) 510 to find joint and several liability for overtime wages from joint employers). "[T]he 511 concept of joint employment should be defined expansively under the FLSA ."
 512 Torres-Lopez v. May, 111 F.3d 633, 639 (9th Cir. 1997).") These factors all argue 513 for Joint responsibility, and legal liability of Joint Defendant/Appellee employers.

515 III. Appellant, Pro Se's, protected activity (complaints to supervisors, HR, 516 management, and company officers, etc.) regarding unpaid overtime, 517 Health and Safety, and other violations for multiple weeks leading to 518 adverse employment activity (wrongful termination based on 519 defamatory false accusation of criminal recording), apparently as 520 pretext, only days after meeting with HR Officer is sufficient under 521 FLSA retaliation standard (as articulated by this Circuit's Rosenfield, 522 and the Supreme Court's Kasten).

523 Jointly responsible Employers added insult to literal injury via their 524 retaliation as plaintiff had a. suffered on the job injury, b. was continually being 525 treated in Tesla Clinic, and c. had required augmented work duties/schedule due to 526 injury while making complaints including the meeting with HR Officer (for which 527 Plaintiff was fraudulently induced into going on the basis of promotion and 528 ensuring payment of unpaid overtime), yet completely opposite was retaliated 529 against, is still injured (and to date has never received Workers compensation, 530 after over 600 days from injury).

531 Under Rosenfield "it is the assertion of statutory rights (i.e. the advocacy of 532 rights) by taking some action adverse to the company—whether via formal 533 complaint, providing testimony in an FLSA proceeding, complaining to superiors 534 about inadequate pay, or otherwise—that is the hallmark of protected activity 535 under § 215(a)(3)." Rosenfield v. Globaltranz Enters., Inc., 811 F.3d 282, 289 (9th 536 Cir. 2015) Under Kasten "the Supreme Court established a "fair notice" test for 537 deciding whether an employee has "filed any complaint" under the anti-retaliation

538 provision of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (“FLSA”), 29 U.S.C. § 539 215(a)(3): “[A] complaint must be sufficiently clear and detailed for a reasonable 540 employer to understand it, in light of both content and context, as an assertion of 541 rights protected by the statute and a call for their protection.” Rosenfield v.
 542 Globaltranz Enters., Inc., 811 F.3d 282, 289 (9th Cir. 2015) (quoting Kasten v.
 543 Saint-Gobain Performance Plastics Corp., 563 U.S. 1, 131 S.Ct. 1325, 1335, 179 544 L.Ed.2d 379 (2011)) The standards were clearly surpassed in Appellant’s 545 pleadings, and disclosures.

546 “Fair notice” to liable joint employer’s was provided and response from 547 their representatives confirms they understood the level of seriousness of 548 complaints.

549 One said as mentioned “you are barking up the wrong tree,” the HR Officer said in 550 Tesla meeting prior to retaliation against Appellant, George Jarvis Austin “you 551 shouldn’t have to deal with that and take the rest of the day off [Paraphrased] 552 (prior to retaliating two days or so later.”

553 Plaintiff/Appellant, Pro Se, made clear leading up to that conversation orally 554 and in writing that there were unpaid overtime wages, and other pay, and time-log

555 discrepancies that needed correction with management supervisors, HR Officers, 556 etc. Plaintiff worked so much overtime whereas management team member 557 inquired into why I was working so hard, and so much, and attempted to put a 558 cap/limit on how much I worked. A variety of persons were provided fair notice 559 including, but not limited to: Jerome Guillen <jerome@tesla.com>; (who 560 apparently took over for Bert Bruggeman), Freddy Rivera <frivera@tesla.com>, 561 multiple Supervisors, Deputy General Counsel Yusef Mohamed 562 Ymohamed@tesla.com), who Bert made intro to when saying I, Appellant, was 563 too smart to work in that Department given skills, intelligence, background and 564 pedigree, etc.), Elon Musk erm@tesla.com (Elon Musk), and management at 565 Tesla prior to HR meeting with Vince Woodard, HR Officer, 566 vwoodard@tesla.com from personal and my Tesla company email 567 geaustin@tesla.com. All were informed prior to, and after, retaliatory, defamatory, 568 and negative employment action was made after Plaintiff/Appellant wage, health 569 and safety, record-keeping and other complaints.

570 Mr. Austin, Pro Se, also made clear Health and Safety Code violations, 571 while being injured on the job, still being treated in Tesla Clinic for those leg

572 injuries. Plaintiff is still suffering from that injury 600+ days later, and still hasn't 573 received Workers compensation. See Austin v Atlina, et. al. Prior to work related 574 injury at Tesla Plaintiff could ride an outside mountain bike, play basketball, and 575 other activities, yet since injury to date has not been able to engage due to leg pains 576 and mobility limitations. From initial complaint the State of California, Auditing 577 and Accounting, Department has since proven the veracity of his wage complaints 578 and even confirmed a minimum amount of unpaid wages, and the specific account 579 number from Defendant/Appellee Employers, when Investigating the wage 580 documents with liable joint employers under the penalty of perjury (submitted to 581 them by George Jarvis Austin prior to paying him maximum weekly benefits based 582 on audited wages due to back injury from an non-work car accident).

583 As articulated in Chao, the initial violations, compounded by the reckless 584 disregard, and malicious retaliation was willful. Chao v. A-One Med. Servs., Inc., 585 346 F.3d 908, 918 (9th Cir. 2003) (“A violation of the FLSA is willful if the 586 employer “knew or showed reckless disregard for the matter of whether its conduct 587 was prohibited by the [FLSA].” McLaughlin v. Richland Shoe Co., 486 U.S. 128, 588 133, 108 S.Ct. 1677, 100 L.Ed.2d 115 (1988); SEIU, Local 02 v. County of San

589 Diego, 60 F.3d 1346, 1356 (9th Cir. 1994) (quoting Richland Shoe)” “See Alvarez

 591 U.S.App. LEXIS 15622, at *36 (noting that willfulness exists "where an employer 592 disregarded the very possibility that it was violating the [FLSA]"") Chao v. AOne 593 Med. Servs., Inc., 346 F.3d 908, 919 n.7 (9th Cir. 2003) (“even viewed in the 594 light most favorable appear to have been steps made to evade the FLSA , not to 595 comply with it. See Alvarez, 339 F.3d 894, 2003 WL 21788995, 2003 U.S.App.

 597 affirmative action to assure compliance with them. To the contrary, ... actions may 598 more properly be characterized as attempts to evade compliance. . . .””)

599 Courts look to federal law when analyzing retaliation claims, and utilizing 600 the three-part burden shifting test described in McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green, 601 411 U.S. 792 (1973)). To establish a prima facie case of retaliation, a plaintiff must 602 demonstrate that (1) [t]he[y] engaged in statutorily protected activity, (I.e. oral and 603 written complaints to all joint employers “up the chain”to supervisors, 604 management, officers, etc) (2) defendants took some adverse employment action 605 against [them], (i.e. Defendants retaliated within days via wrongful termination, 606 unsupported, nor investigated defamation, and a complete ‘about face’ regarding 607 the purpose of the meeting (for promotion), and instructed to get treated by Tesla

608 Clinic further confirming extent of physical injury, and prescribing next steps 609 including MRI, and other tests,) and (3) there is a causal connection between the 610 protected activity and the discharge. (Causal link in connection as explicit purpose 611 of meeting outside of promotion was to correct companies errors of unpaid wages 612 (and other violations), whereas plaintiff complained for weeks leading up to 613 meeting without correction (in oral and written form), and whereas after the 614 meeting plaintiff again was assured the meeting was only to fix their labor code, 615 and other violations (I.e. unpaid overtime, etc.), they instead made a complete 616 about face, and took negative employment action within days.) See Stegall v.
617 Citadel Broad. Co., 350 F.3d 1061, 1065-1066 (9th Cir. 2003)
618 “An employee need not file a formal or detailed complaint to enjoy the protection 619 of Section 215(a). Lambert v. Ackerley, 180 F.3d 997, 1007-08 (9th Cir.
620 1999). Rather, “[to] fall within the scope of the anti-retaliation provision, a 621 complaint must be sufficiently clear and detailed for a reasonable employer to 622 understand it, in light of both content and context, as an assertion of rights

623 protected by the statute and a call for their protection." Kasten v. Saint-Gobain 624 Performance Plastics Corp.

625 must be determined on a case- by-case basis, is whether the described activity 626 placed the employer on "fair notice that an employee is making a complaint that 627 could subject the employer to a later claim of retaliation." Rosenfield v.
 628 GlobalTranz Enterprises, Inc., 811 F.3d 282, 286 (9th Cir. 2015). "[I]t is clear that 654 Enter., Inc., 811 F.3d 282, 287 (9th Cir. 2015) ("Kasten's") "the Court of Appeals 655 determined that a jury could reasonably find that Rosenfield's complaints constituted 656 a protected activity under section 215(a)(3) as FLSA compliance was not part of 657 Rosenfield's job duties; thus, her advocacy for the rights of employees to be paid in 658 accordance with the FLSA qualified as "any complaint" under FLSA" 659 Analogously Appellant, Pro Se's, written an oral complaints to supervisors, 660 managers, HR, Officers, etc. of all Defendant Joint Employers regarding unpaid 661 overtime, would qualify, and surpass that standard.

662 Even the dissent in Rosenfield would agree with Appellant's position.
 663 Under Dissents' more stringent standard Appellants actions (under the Fair Labor 664 Standards Act' anti-retaliation provision 'protected conduct) would still constitute 665 "filed any complaint" ... [which] contemplates some degree of formality ... [.]" Id.
 666 at 1334. The Court repeatedly referenced "oral grievances," id. at 1333, in 667 connection with "workplace grievance procedures," id. at 1334, and emphasized 668 that including oral complaints in the definition of "any complaint" allows for the 669 use of "hotlines, interviews, and other oral methods of receiving complaints," id. at 670 1334, as well as other "desirable informal workplace grievance procedures." Id.
 671 The examples of oral complaints provided by the Supreme Court in Kasten
 672 contemplate a degree of formality [that is actually found in Appellant's complaints, 673 that the dissent argued lacked in Rosenfield]" See Rosenfield v. Globaltranz

A. Defendant Employers are jointly responsible for Retaliation and Civil Rights violations due to employer retaliation because of FLSA violation, and other Health and Safety Code complaints under joint employment doctrine, as well as extended, and shared, liability articulated in Arias.

Analogous to the joint liability created for wage violations under FLSA, the same, and more, contribute to extensive liability for retaliation by joint employers under FLSA. All key factors are in favor of joint-employer responsibility as Plaintiff's wage payments came through all organizational entities Personnel Staffing Group, and Balance Staffing, and originated from Tesla (as noted on the check stubs disclosed per General Order 71 See Docket #20, #68 (Verified Plaintiff's wages, and wage statements for Q3 and Q4 Plaintiff wages for Q3 & Q4, with wages in Q4 totaling above the maximum benefit threshold of $28,145.01 (for months October through December) triggering Plaintiffs maximum benefit amount of $1,300 weekly; investigated and confirmed by Defendant Employers via State of California Auditing and Accounting Department, Investigators under penalty of perjury), for work at Tesla. One Hundred (100%) of the training, supervision,

692 management, safety protocols, on the job injury, control, scheduling, inspection, 693 and initial treatment in Tesla Clinic (while on augmented work schedule due to 694 ongoing leg injuries) and other controls (Badges, Electronic Scheduling Device, 695 Internal communication systems, etc.) were at, and with, Tesla. Accordingly, in 696 the Ninth Circuit, "the concept of joint employment should be defined expansively 697 under the FLSA." Chao v. A-One Med. Servs., Inc., 346 F.3d 908, 917 (9th Cir.
 698 2003) (quoting Torres-Lopez v. May, 111 F.3d 633, 639 (9th Cir. 1997)). An 699 employee may work for two employers simultaneously.)

700 The liability for retaliatory acts is more expansive and does not stop, at the 701 moment of negative employment action (even wrongful termination) under 702 Darveau. See Darveau v. Detecon, Inc., 515 F.3d 334, 342 (4th Cir. 2008) ("The 703 similar statutory language suggests that the Supreme Court's interpretation of 704 "employee" in Robinson—to include former as well as current employees—and 705 definition of retaliatory acts in Burlington Northern similarly apply in the FLSA 706 context.") (cited by Arias v. Raimondo, 860 F.3d 1185, 1190 (9th Cir. 2017)).
 707 Given the similar statutory language between Title VII and the FLSA, there is no
 708 reason to believe the same principles would not apply in the FLSA context. -

709 Heier v. Czika CASE NO. 5:19-cv-1955 (N.D. Ohio Aug. 18, 2020)

710 Antiretaliation claims ... are not limited to employers but, instead, extend to "any 711 person acting directly or indirectly in the interest of the employer." See Arias v.

712 Raimondo, 860 F.3d 1185 (9th Cir. 2017) ("Congress clearly means to extend ...

713 reach beyond actual employers.") Berglund v. Canyon Cnty Case No. 1:19-cv-

714 00396-CWD (D. Idaho Mar. 4, 2020)

715 "[T]he plain language of the statute belies that focus. § 215(a)(3), the FLSA 716 retaliation provision, states that "it shall be unlawful for any person . . . to

717 discharge or in any other manner discriminate [or retaliate] against any employee

718 because such employee has filed any complaint[.]" See also Arias v. Raimondo, 719 860 F.3d 1185 (9th Cir. 2017) ("Congress clearly means to extend section 720 215(a)(3)'s reach beyond actual employers") - Braxton v. Jackson Civil Action No.

721 DKC 18-1946 (D. Md. Sep. 20, 2019) The Ninth Circuit has held that "[t]he 722 definition of 'employer' under the FLSA is not limited by the common law concept

723 of 'employer,' and is to be given an expansive interpretation in order to effectuate

724 the FLSA's broad remedial purposes." Bonnette v. Cal. Health & Welfare Agency,

725 704 F.2d 1465, 1469 (9th Cir. 1983); see also Arias v. Raimondo, 860 F.3d 1185, 726 1191-92 (9th Cir. 2017) (finding the term "employer" for purposes of FLSA's 727 antiretaliation provision "extend[s] . . . [the statute's] reach beyond actual 728 employers" and can include individuals acting indirectly and on behalf of wage-729 paying employers). Thus, "Congress clearly means to extend section 215(a)(3)'s 730 reach beyond actual employers." Estacion v. Kaumana Drive Partners Civ. No. 19-

- (Kristin Hull will have roughly three minutes to make the case against the company's use of mandatory arbitration for employee sexual harassment and racial discrimination claims. Hull is the founder and chief executive of Nia Impact Capital, a social impact fund based in Oakland, California that invests in several sustainable energy companies. Most people who work directly for Tesla sign away their rights to a trial. Hull wants to know how many discrimination and harassment cases go to arbitration, how much that's costing the company, and investors, and the demographics of those bringing the claims. "We are in this to win this," said Hull during a socially distant interview in Oakland's historic Preservation Park, near Nia's office. "It's the issue of our time, and it's a Civil Rights issue. "Arbitration is used as a form of claim suppression," Cliff Palefsky, a San Francisco employment lawyer, who has testified before Congress about mandatory arbitration, said of the practice broadly. "Instead of court, it's a secret tribunal with no right of appeal." Tesla's board opposes the proposal...Tesla has faced multiple allegations of racial discrimination and harassment at its factory in Fremont, California,..In recent years, Tesla has faced high profile allegations of racial discrimination at its Fremont plant, where roughly 10,000 people work. In late 2017, a Black worker, Marcus Vaughn, filed a lawsuit saying the plant was a "hotbed of racist behavior."...In 2018, Owen Diaz and his son Demetric filed suit as well, alleging a pattern of racial harassment and hostility. Demetric dropped his suit voluntarily, but Owen's case is slated for trial before a U.S. district court judge in San Francisco in October. The company said in an emailed statement to Bloomberg at the time that it takes discrimination and harassment of all forms "extremely seriously" and has a dedicated team focused on investigating and addressing workplace concerns. All three men were contract workers, so they never signed arbitration agreements. Tesla argued that Vaughn's case shouldn't go to court anyway; the car-maker lost that appeal.)

The plaintiffs, who are black, said they were subjected to repeated racial epithets dozens of times, as well as racist cartoons, and that supervisors engaged in or did little to stop the racism...Orrick said Diaz could pursue claims that Tesla allowed and did not take reasonable steps to stop racial harassment...He said punitive damages might be available if Tesla must have known about the harassment and "ratified" it, even if only lower level workers were directly involved.... - (Since 2014, workers have filed 145 complaints with California's Department of Fair Employment and Housing alleging discrimination at Tesla on the basis of race, age, gender, disability, medical leave, pregnancy, sexual orientation, and national origin, according to a synopsis provided by the agency after a California Public Records Act request. This May, three separate people alleged they were forced to quit because of their race. While the state issued right-to-sue letters in all three cases allowing them to proceed in court, it's possible they'll be bound by arbitration clauses. Tesla did not respond to a request for comment on the complaints.
- Arbitration has long been the bane of employment discrimination lawyers. Instead of having a hearing before a jury, cases go in front of an arbitrator, which industry data shows are overwhelmingly older White men. Transcripts usually aren't available to the public, keeping bad actors out of the public eye and allowing inappropriate behavior to go unchecked.
- "The deck is stacked in a much less favorable way for employees," said Hilary Hammell, an employment discrimination attorney at Levy Vinick Burrell Hyams LLP in Oakland, who has written about how forced arbitration can hurt Black workers. Employers, and their lawyers, argue that the process is expedient, just, and cost-effective. And in the era of Covid-19, arbitration proceedings can be conducted remotely, while jury trials have largely ground to a halt.....For Hull, this isn't her first time pushing companies for more transparency. Workers at Tesla's Fremont, California electric car factory have filed a unfair labor practice charge with the National Labor Relations Board (NLRB), accusing the company of illegal surveillance, coercion, intimidation and prevention of worker communications. Owen Diaz, right, and his son, Demetric, said they had heard racial slurs directed toward them while working at the Tesla factory in Fremont, Calif.Credit...Ryan Christopher Jones for The New York Times Menial Tasks, Slurs and Swastikas: Many Black Workers at Tesla Say They Faced Racism African-American workers have reported threats, humiliation and barriers to promotion at the plant. The automaker says there is no pattern of bias.... Owen Diaz had seen swastikas in the bathrooms at Tesla's electric-car plant, and he had tried to ignore racist taunts around the factory. "You hear, 'Hey, boy, come here,' 'N-i-g-g-e-r,' you know, all this," said Mr. Diaz, who is African-American. Then, a few hours into his shift running the elevators, he noticed a drawing on a bale of cardboard. It had an oversize mouth, big eyes and a bone stuck in the patch of hair scribbled over a long face, with “Booo” written underneath....On that winter night in the factory, when, he said, a supervisor admitted drawing the figure as a joke, Mr. Diaz had had enough. He typed a complaint to a Tesla manager on his phone. “Racist effigy & drawing” was the subject.

- “When you really just look at it, you ask yourself at some point, ‘Where is my line?’” said Mr. Diaz, 50, who worked at the factory as a contractor for 11 months before he quit in May 2016....Interviews, internal communications and sworn legal statements filed by more than two dozen current or former Tesla employees and contractors describe a wide range of concerns among some African-American workers at the factory in Fremont, including threats by co-workers, demeaning assignments and barriers to advancement. Three lawsuits by former workers accusing Tesla of failing to curb racial discrimination and harassment have been filed since early last year, including one by Mr. Diaz awaiting trial.”....One suit accusing Tesla of racial discrimination and harassment, filed last November in California Superior Court, seeks class-action status. The lawyers involved — Lawrence A. Organ and Bryan Schwartz, whose practices focus on workplace rights — say they have identified dozens of potential plaintiffs. Each lawyer has won multimillion-dollar judgments in other harassment or discrimination cases against major employers. Tesla is seeking to move the case into arbitration, which would require workers to bring individual lawsuits rather than a joint claim.
- The state’s Department of Fair Employment and Housing says it has issued 10 “right to sue” letters — a precondition for a discrimination lawsuit — to employees complaining of racial bias at the Fremont plant. Dozens of other complaints against Tesla are pending, but the agency would not say how many involved race. In an email to employees last year, which the company later released in response to one of the lawsuits, Elon Musk, Tesla’s chief executive, warned against “being a huge jerk” to members of “a historically less represented group.” At the same time, he wrote, “if someone is a jerk to you, but sincerely apologizes, it is important to be thick-skinned and accept that apology.”)

The employee says he's one of more than 100 African-American Tesla workers affected and is seeking permission from a judge to sue on behalf of the group. He's seeking unspecified general and punitive monetary damages as well as an order for Tesla to implement policies to prevent and correct harassment...."Although Tesla stands out as a groundbreaking company at the forefront of the electric car revolution, its standard operating procedure at the Tesla factory is pre-Civil Rights era race discrimination," the employee said in the complaint, filed Monday in California's Alameda County Superior Court..... The lawsuit was filed on behalf of Marcus Vaughn, who worked in the Fremont factory from April 23 to Oct. 31. Vaughn alleged that employees and supervisors regularly used the "N word" around him and other black colleagues. Vaughn said he complained in writing to human resources and Musk.....Larry Organ, an attorney at the California Civil Rights Law Group, said that Vaughn reached out to him after the law firm sued Tesla on behalf of other African American employees who complained about racial harassment this year. - (A Tesla factory worker said he was called the N-word '100 times' by coworkers, according to a sworn testimony....Former Tesla workers routinely used racial slurs against Black employees, according to sworn testimonies obtained by Protocol. Aaron Craven, a Black worker at Tesla's Fremont factory, said in a sworn statement he had been called the N-word "approximately 100 times," and saw KKK signs and swastika graffitied in bathroom stalls. Workers submitted 103 declarations in March 2021 as part 2017 lawsuit suing Tesla for racial harassment. "I was directly called n---- and n---- approximately 100 times at the Fremont factory," Craven said a sworn statement reviewed by Protocol. "I heard the terms n----- and n---- used over 100 times by coworkers, and by my lead Auggie, in the Tesla factory." Additionally, ex-contractor Aaron Minor stated he heard Tesla employees refer to the Fremont factory as a plantation and Black people as "cotton workers," Protocol reported.

- Two separate lawsuits filed against Tesla in 2017 alleged racial harassment and discrimination at the Fremont plant. Former Tesla worker DeWitt Lambert said coworkers regularly called him the N-word and made sexually explicit comments. In 2019, Black and Latino workers at a Tesla factory in Buffalo, New York, filed discrimination complaints with the US Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) and the New York Division of Human Rights. The six former workers said they heard racial slurs and racist comments at the factory.)

- (Racist graffiti, 'plantation' jokes and 100 potential lawsuits: Ex-workers say Tesla is still racist...The N-word, demeaning jokes and retaliation on the basis of race are all common at Tesla, according to 100-plus sworn statements from a class-action lawsuit and public records obtained by Protocol....When Aaron Craven clocked in to work every day at the Tesla Fremont factory, he knew he might hear or be called the N-word. When he walked into the bathroom stalls, he knew he might see graffiti of "KKK" or a swastika.
- "I was directly called n----- and n---- approximately 100 times at the Fremont factory," Craven said in a sworn statement. "I heard the terms n----- and n---- used over 100 times by co-workers, and by my lead Auggie, in the Tesla factory. Former Tesla workers also called ex-contractor Aaron Minor "n-----," and Minor, too, found swastikas in the bathroom. Minor heard the factory called "the Plantation" and its Black employees "cotton workers." "My understanding is that people refer to the Tesla factory as the Plantation and call employees cotton workers because Tesla treats its Black employees like slaves," he wrote in a sworn statement.
- These sworn statements and 103 other declarations sworn under penalty of perjury comprise a 500-page exhibit filed in March 2021 as part of a 2017 lawsuit that alleges Tesla discriminates against Black people and has allowed a racially hostile work environment to fester in its factories. The lawsuit's allegations against the company are not unique:....Race-based complaints about Tesla are on average more common than the proportion of race-based complaints state-wide; while about 10% of all cases requesting right to sue were filed on the basis of race with the DFEH in 2020 (and less than that in previous years), more than 30% of the Tesla cases from 2018 to 2021 are based on allegations of racial discrimination.”)

- (Ex-Tesla employee called a racial slur wins rare $1-million reward ... a Black former employee who won a ruling after alleging that supervisors called him the “N-word” Tesla Inc. has paid more than $1 million to a Black former employee who won a ruling that the company failed to stop his supervisors from calling him the “N-word” at the electric-car maker’s Northern California plant. The rare discrimination award by an arbitrator to Melvin Berry, which followed a closed-door proceeding, caps years of complaints from Black workers that Tesla turned a blind eye to the commonplace use of racial slurs on the assembly line and was slow to clean up graffiti with swastikas and other hate symbols scrawled in common areas. It ends a years-long and emotionally grueling fight launched by Berry, who was hired by the company as a materials handler in 2015 and quit less than 18 months later.
- Arbitration typically keeps disputes between employees and companies secret, but court filings reveal that the arbitrator found Berry’s allegations more credible than Tesla’s denials, though she called it a “difficult” case after hearing from witnesses on both sides. Berry claimed that when he confronted a supervisor for calling him the “N-word,” he was forced to work longer hours and push a heavier cart....“I hope the world knows that an arbitrator found Tesla treats its employees like this,” Berry, 47, told Bloomberg News in a phone interview Wednesday. He ..said he’s now taking time off to focus on his mental health as he still hasn’t “gotten over the healing process.”.....,” arbitrator Elaine Rushing said in her May 12 ruling, which hasn’t been previously reported. Rushing, a former judge in Sonoma County Superior Court for almost two decades..... Rushing “was clearly troubled by the facts, culture at the company and the tone of the defense.”.....After his supervisors turned against him, Berry alleged, he suffered from sleepless nights, panic attacks, depression and anxiety, prompting him to seek help from a psychologist for the first time, according to the ruling. He broke down during the arbitration proceeding as he recalled how he “became quiet and cried a lot” and “questioned his sanity,” Rushing wrote.....“This is a case of a 23-year-old White man with only a high-school education supervising a 43-year-old African-American man with a college degree, a classic invitation for serious resentment,” she wrote.....In 2020, 31 complaints were filed with California’s Department of Fair Employment and Housing alleging discrimination at Tesla on the basis of race, age, gender expression, disability and pregnancy, according to data obtained from public records. The state agency issued right-to-sue letters in a majority of the cases; a handful were closed with insufficient evidence. In July, Valerie Workman, Tesla’s vice president of people, posted on the company’s blog to remind employees about the use of slurs and epithets as they prepared to return to offices.”)

A former Tesla employee named Melvin Berry was awarded over $1 million in an arbitration hearing earlier this year after he filed complaints about racist harassment at work — including his direct supervisor calling him the N-word and then punishing him with longer hours of harder work for speaking out about it.

- Toxic Culture.....Arbitrator Elaine Rushing decided that the evidence that Berry — who quit after 18 months and dealt with panic attacks, depression, and anxiety as a result — was harassed was clear.....“Racial discrimination awards are rare and it seems this was especially hard-fought,” employment lawyer Cliff Palefsky, who wasn’t involved in the case, told Bloomberg News. - (The resolution requests that Tesla’s Board of Directors oversee the preparation of a report on the impact of the use of mandatory arbitration on Tesla’s employees and workplace culture. The report should evaluate the impact of Tesla’s current use of arbitration on the prevalence of harassment and discrimination in its workplace and on employees’ ability to seek redress should harassment and discrimination occur.....The proposal speaks to the widespread experience in the economy of discrimination in the workplace by African American, Hispanic and female employees, despite this discrimination being unlawful under the Civil Rights Act of 1964. Those companies that tolerate discrimination and harassment in their own workplaces allow unnecessary legal, brand, financial, and human capital risk within their companies. In contrast, studies show that companies with strong workplace equity programs are more likely to outperform peers with poor diversity programs.
- The use of mandatory arbitration in employee agreements limits employees’ remedies for wrongdoing.....Corporate Policies that Allow Harassment and Discrimination Risk Investors’ Capital....Identified benefits of diverse teams include: access to top talent, better understanding of consumer preferences, a stronger mix of leadership skills, informed strategy discussions, and improved risk management. Diversity, and the different perspectives it encourages, has also been shown to encourage more creative and innovative workplace environments.

- In contrast, companies where harassment and discrimination exist may experience reduced employee morale and productivity, increased absenteeism, challenges in attracting talent and difficulties in retaining talent. Employees directly experiencing workplace discrimination....Tesla employees have alleged harassment and discrimination on the basis of race and gender. A number of employees have come forward with allegations of harassment and discrimination at Tesla. While the company disputes these allegations on various grounds, the pattern of allegations is difficult for reasonable investors to ignore:
 - In 2017, AJ Vendermeyden alleged that she experienced harassment and discrimination as an engineer at Tesla's Fremont plant. According to Ms. Vendermeyden, a part of the factory was known to women as the “predator zone.” While Tesla stated that it conducted investigations of Ms. Vendermeyden’s claims and found them baseless, it held the case in arbitration, preventing it from going to court. Ms. Vendermeyden was eventually fired from Tesla. Tesla told The Guardian that Ms. Vendermeyden was fired for “falsely attacking our company in the press.”¹³
 - In 2017, DeWitt Lambert alleged that he experienced harassment and violent threats while working at Tesla’s Fremont, California. His allegation included recordings of co-workers stating “N, we take your ass home, n. Shred you up in pieces, n. Cut you up, n. Send your ass so everyone in yo family so everybody can have a piece of you, n.”¹⁴ In March of that year, Tesla general counsel, Todd Maron, wrote to Mr. Lambert’s lawyers: “In terms of settlement, we are willing to pay Mr. Lambert [redacted], but only if we are to resolve this matter before there is media attention, preferably within the next few hours.” He also wrote, “If there is media attention first, there will be no deal.”¹⁵ Mr. Lambert’s case was held in arbitration and Mr. Lambert was fired from Tesla. The company said that it had discovered problems with his conduct and work history.¹⁶
 - In November 2019, WIVB4, a local news station in Buffalo, reported that six African American and Hispanic Tesla workers had reported racist experiences in Tesla’s Buffalo plant. As of February, 2020, WIVB4 reported that it was aware of twelve employees that had inquired about filing complaints with the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission and the state Division of Human Rights, alleging a racist, hostile work environment. In its interviews, however, employees spoke anonymously, given their fears of retaliation from the company.)

Inside a medical clinic not far from Tesla's electric car factory, Yvette Bonnet started noting a troubling pattern. The automaker's workers' compensation manager would pressure her boss, Dr. Basil Besh, to make sure Tesla wasn't on the hook for certain injured workers. And in her observation, Besh did whatever he could to not jeopardize his chance to run Tesla's on-site factory clinic.
- “He would say, ‘I’m not losing the contract over this – get this case closed,’” said Bonnet, who was operations manager for Besh’s Access Omnicare clinic in Fremont, California, for about a year. “Besh wanted to make certain that we were doing what Tesla wanted so badly,” she said. “He got the priorities messed up. It’s supposed to be patients first.”...)

- But then a manager from your employer steps in and says, no it was just minor static electric shock, like the kind you get when you touch a doorknob after walking on the rug, just so the company isn't on the hook for the associated medical costs with your treatment and doesn't have to report the workplace injury to regulators.....This is not the first time Reveal has brought to light sketchy workplaces practices from the electric car company. - Tesla fired safety official for reporting unsafe conditions, lawsuit says ... A former high-level safety official at Tesla Inc. has sued the company for failing to treat injured employees and for misclassifying work injuries to avoid reporting them as required by law...Carlos Ramirez, a director of environment, health, safety and sustainability at Tesla until June 2017, alleges he was fired in retaliation for reporting unsafe working conditions, such as chemical exposures and fires, and for refusing to go along with what he believed to be illegal practices.
- More from Insult to Injury.... An April investigation by Reveal from The Center for Investigative Reporting found that Tesla undercounted its workers' injuries, making the official injury rate look better than it actually was. The suit also says Ramirez, who is Mexican American, faced harassment based on his race and national origin and that Tesla failed to address it.
- Ramirez previously worked as vice president of environmental, health and safety for SolarCity, a solar panel manufacturer Tesla acquired in 2016...Carlos Ramirez, a former safety official at Tesla Inc., sued the automaker for allegedly firing him in retaliation for reporting unsafe working conditions and safety violations. ... After he came to Tesla, Ramirez and his team audited the company's internal injury tracking system, the suit says. The 2017 audit "revealed numerous instances of lack of treatment of Tesla employees that suffered workplace injuries, recordkeeping violations, and improper classification of workplace injuries to avoid treating and reporting workplace injuries," it says.

- Severely injured worker sues Tesla: 'I'm not who I used to be' ...Chuong Nguyen (left) helps look after his brother, Son, as he recovers from a severe burn injury at Tesla's car factory in 2017....A man severely burned in an electrical explosion at Tesla's car factory is suing the automaker for allegedly putting him in harm's way "in order to increase productivity at the expense of human lives."

- Son Nguyen was working as a contractor at the Fremont, California, factory on June 5, 2017, when an explosion called an arc flash threw him back 15 to 20 feet and engulfed him in flames...More from Insult to Injury...Nguyen's lawsuit says Tesla should have cut electricity to the equipment he was working on, but refused to because the company didn't want to temporarily stop production.
- Nearly a year later, he is in constant pain and covered in scars and skin grafts, his pinky finger amputated, a compression garment covering him from head to knees. Nerve pain, which he says feels like "thousands of pins and needles poking you," keeps him up at night. He struggles with basic tasks and dreads the surgeries to come...."I don't want anybody to go through what I went through,"

- Tesla hit by government investigation after Reveal story.....Tesla officials Laurie Shelby (left) and Gaby Toledano read the concerns of then-safety lead Justine White, who emailed CEO Elon Musk's chief of staff in 2016. "I know what can keep a person up at night regarding safety," she wrote. "I must tell you that I can't sleep here at Tesla."....California's workplace safety agency opened an investigation of Tesla Inc. on Tuesday, the day after Reveal from The Center for Investigative Reporting published an investigation of safety problems and unreported injuries at the carmaker's Fremont factory.
- Reveal found that Tesla did not count all of its work injuries as required by law, making its safety record look better than it actually is...."Cal/OSHA takes seriously reports of workplace hazards and allegations of employers' underreporting recordable work-related injuries and illnesses," said Erika Monterroza, spokeswoman for the state Department of Industrial Relations, which includes the Division of Occupational Safety and Health, known as Cal/OSHA.....Cal/OSHA has cited Tesla for more than 40 health and safety violations since 2013. This year, the agency cited the company for failing to provide employees with effective information and training on chemical hazards in their work areas, as well as failing to “effectively assess the workplace” for chemical hazards.

 - INSULT TO INJURY - Inside Tesla's factory, a medical clinic designed to ignore injured workers Former Tesla worker Stephon Nelson clutches his back as he climbs steps outside his girlfriend's home in Oakland, Calif. He was injured in August while working in the trunk of a Model X. Something slipped and its hatchback crunched down on his back. ... When a worker gets smashed by a car part on Tesla's factory floor, medical staff are forbidden from calling 911 without permission.
 - The electric carmaker's contract doctors rarely grant it, instead often insisting that seriously injured workers – including one who severed the top of a finger – be sent to the emergency room in a Lyft....Injured employees have been systematically sent back to the production line to work through their pain with no modifications, according to former clinic employees, Tesla factory workers and medical records. Some could barely walk.
 - The on-site medical clinic serving some 10,000 employees at Tesla Inc.'s California assembly plant has failed to properly care for seriously hurt workers, an investigation by Reveal from The Center for Investigative Reporting has found.....The clinic's practices are unsafe and unethical, five former clinic employees said....But denying medical care and work restrictions to injured workers is good for one thing: making real injuries disappear. “The goal of the clinic was to keep as many patients off of the books as possible,” said Anna Watson, a physician assistant who worked at Tesla's medical clinic for three weeks in August.....Watson has nearly 20 years of experience as a medical professional

- Tesla and its Contractors Again Cited and Fined for Labor Violations in California
- October 24, 2019 / Press Release.. For the second time in recent months, an investigation from the Maintenance Cooperation Trust Fund has turned into a citation from the state LOS ANGELES – The State of California has cited Tesla and its janitorial contractors for not paying janitors their full wages at one of Tesla’s San Jose facilities.
- Workers who cleaned the facility between 2015 and 2018 were underpaid for the hours they worked, workers received checks with no deductions statement, and were misclassified as independent contractors. Tesla’s contractors, Leonardo Valencia and Orbit USA, LLC were cited and owe $370,000 for willfully misclassifying workers, including workers who worked at the Tesla facility. Leonardo Valencia and Orbit USA, LLC were also cited for underpaid work at the Tesla facility and other locations. Tesla was cited for more than $30,000 for violations of minimum wage and overtime requirements, meal and rest period violations, failure to comply with itemized statement provision, plus additional penalties.
- “Too often, subcontractors have overworked and underpaid janitors with no consequences. New California laws help to give workers more protections and hold companies like Tesla responsible,” said Rafael Ventura, Interim Executive Director. “Tesla must stop using contractors who evade the law and exploit their workers to make their bottom line.”

- “I was misclassified as an independent contractor so my employer could cut costs, even though I worked at Tesla full time,” said Santiago Paz. “I was denied overtime and my workers’ rights. I worked hard and I deserve to be paid fairly.”
- Wage theft (and these types of labor code violations are a wide spread problem - Addenda ref). The company itself, as well as its subcontractors, as well as these particular subcontractors, who they (Tesla) also have a legal duty to ensure paid, and worker’s compensation according to rulings … (see addenda - see specific rulings from them).

But at the automaker Tesla, in Fremont, California, under-recording is more than a paper exercise in deception — at Tesla it means withholding needed medical treatment of injured workers so that their injuries aren't report on OSHA logs. We wrote previously about reports that workers are getting hurt at Tesla and that many of those injuries are not being recorded.... CalOSHA has inspected the company a number of times and found recordkeeping violations. Now Evans shows the many ways that Tesla is keeping injuries off the OSHA logs.)

Workers in the U.S. generally bear the burden of enforcing their own labor protections—it is up to them to come forward to report violations. When a worker comes forward to report a workplace violation, we know that employers often retaliate or threaten to retaliate against the worker. ·Under our current system, workers bear the entire risk of retaliation from their employer when they report violations. What Does Retaliation Look Like? Retaliation takes many shapes and can be difficult to pinpoint or prove. Employers, for example, may fire a worker, demote a worker, reduce a worker's hours, change worker's schedule to a less favorable one, subject a worker to new forms of harassment, unfairly discipline a worker, threaten to report a worker or a worker's family member to immigration authorities, and much more.)

[41]-Editorial: Tesla worker betrayal brings call for action (East Bay Times) – East Bay Times

- (The Sunday story by the Bay Area News Group's Louis Hansen about the hidden workforce that expanded Tesla's Fremont factory was shocking. It raises red flags about labor practices and B1 visa abuses throughout the Bay Area. The betrayal by Tesla is especially disappointing. The cutting-edge carmaker was regarded as the role model for bringing manufacturing jobs back to California. It was the prototype feel-good, green industry that paid its skilled workers a premium for their ultra-productive work. But not the workers imported to build the expansion of the state-of-the-art plant. They were hired through a contractor and paid the wages they would make in their own impoverished countries, $5 an hour in some cases. In a formal response to the story Monday, Tesla issued a statement saying "mistakes were made" and the company pledged to "put in place additional oversight to ensure that our workplace rules are followed even by sub-subcontractors to prevent such a thing from happening again.")
